PROGRAMME OVERVIEW:

All of our schools for teaching drama are set in and around the mesmerizing city of Madurai. Generally the standard of teaching in Southern India is quite high as the schools we work with are Matriculation schools where English is taught as the first language.

The children in India are eager to learn and you will be greeted with big warm smiles. You are likely to be in great demand both in and out of the classroom. Practice your signature before your placement as you will be signing a lot of autographs!

Teaching drama is an excellent way of engaging children's imaginations and encourages them to communicate with few constraints. What's more, it is very satisfying to watch their confidence grow as they learn and develop new skills.

Dance, drama and music can help teach children life skills, help with their communication and socialisation. Children in India love to perform whether it is singing or acting on stage so they will be eagerly awaiting their every lesson with you!

You will be expected to prepare your lessons in advance because the principals and teachers are serious about their children's education and will want them to get the most out of having you help them.

The main school holidays are during April and May at the peak of summer. Many of the schools offer "Summer Camps" to the students during this holiday period where the children can participate in sports, and have fun whilst still learning. These Summer Camps are usually held on the school premises for approximately 60 children and are an opportunity to give more informal lessons and combining them with playing a sport or putting together a music concert or play – much more relaxed and not quite so structured. You can choose to get involved with summer camps in addition to your placement, alternatively please see the website if you wish to just participate in the camp.

Work Content

You will work Monday to Friday and usually between 9am – 3pm. Initially you may observe the teachers and then take lessons on your own, however please be prepared to take classes from the outset just in case you are thrown into the deep end!

You will be teaching drama to children from the age of 5 to 12. The Principals at the schools are very keen for the children to develop their acting skills and you will have free rein on devising your own lessons. You may even be able to put on a production at the school. This can be discussed with the principle at your induction. You will normally teach 4 to 5 classes per day.

TIPS FOR TEACHING DRAMA

Allow children to express themselves

Drama is a very good way for children to express themselves. Giving children the independence when teaching drama is important as it encourages creativity.

Speak clearly when giving instructions to children

When teaching drama when giving instructions speak clearly and in a raised voice so that they will hear you and understand you. You may often find yourself repeating yourself due to language difficulties.

Prizes or rewards

A great way of encouraging the class and keeping them attentive and under control is by using a reward scheme. Whether is as simple as a star chart where the winner at the end of the week gets a prize, to handing out balloons, it gives the class something exciting to work hard for; a little motivation and credit where it's due really does go a long way.

Variety

Make sure you never pick the same person to lead an exercise or start first. Allow all the children a chance especially if they are shy or lack confidence, or even don't speak great English. Drama is the best way (and the most enjoyable way) to help these children.

Don't use the same exercises every week. If you do then after a while they may get boring and the children will lose interest. Keep your lessons fresh.

Named after the goddess Meenakshi, it was built in the 17th century and is an enormous structure with 12 towers adorned with colourful images of gods and goddesses, imaginative creatures and animals. This magnificent temple is the religious centre of attraction and a hive of activity which you won't want to miss. This area is awash with pilgrims market stalls and impressive souvenir shops. Madurai is also famous for its rich textiles and fabrics and superb quality gold and silver.

Madurai oozes true Indian culture and if you want to immerse yourself completely in the Indian way of life; Madurai is definitely the place to be! Children will stop you on the streets to chat to you and shake your hand and even ask for your autograph! In the South of India winter starts around November and lasts until February. Temperatures rarely drop below 25C during the day but the evenings can be a little cooler. Summer, the hot dry season starts around April and continues till July. The latter half of May in Madurai is the peak of summer with temperatures soaring to 40C and above. There are two monsoons in the south; the first is the Southwest monsoon that occurs 1 June–30 September, however Madurai doesn't see too much rain at this time. The Northeast monsoon occurs between October and December; the rains can be abundant although rarely does it rain all day or indeed every day but it cause disruptions to the traffic and on occasions schools can be closed.

VOLUNTEER FEEDBACK:

“With Travellers, I really lived in India. With the lifestyle and routine, I never felt like a tourist trying to scratch under the surface, because I was already there. I lived and taught in Madurai for a month. I did it because I wanted to really get to know India through the eyes of an Indian, and because I wanted to help the children speak the best English possible. What I got out of it was so much more than that, because the Indian people and the children gave so much back. I can't recommend it enough”
